

Group 01 // Chorlton WORKshops

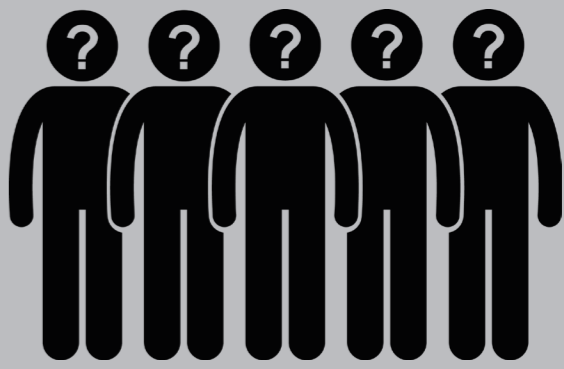

Our initial analysis revealed that Chorlton faces an unemployment crisis alongside an absence of identity within the community, the high street has an opportunity to address these issues.

Through the introduction of a community allotments, the diverse population of Chorlton can grow together; inclusive of all demographics, with harvests to be used to supply markets in the district centre, run by local residents. Thus creating a sustainable cycle producing job opportunities, improvements to the local environment and increasing interaction with the high street. Introduction of craftsmanship workshops provides an opportunity to display skills and pass expertise to younger generations, products created to be sold in the markets thus reviving disused shops.
