Memorial Junction

Palatine Road

The path to River Mersey

Northenden Revival represents Palatine Road, Northenden as a journey through death, rebirth and life. Users experience this concept as they move through spaces commemorating the soldiers highlighted with the present of cobblestone hard landscaping towards a market square marked by the introduction of soft landscaping and extension of the river canal. This responds to the need of the demographic as empty derelict shops become vibrant social spaces and local organic stores replace franchise names like tesco. Pedestrian movement is encouraged as an alternative vehicular route is proposed and bike lanes are introduced to encourage a healthier lifestyle, resulting in a more attractive, vibrant street.

The promenade is renewed with the removal of inactive derelict stores and addition of new cafes, stores and social spaces. This revitalizes the area, improving the appearance and general servicing. The proposed market will give its users a pleasant 'walk and shop' experience and will provide them with a better designed, open public recreational spaces.

This area marks the north entrance to the promenade, using a natural threshold such as trees and water. This is the closest point River Mersey infiltrates the street. A change of scale occurs with the transition from a highway to a local street, with more pedestrianised areas and open shops.
